DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This frame farmhouse comprises three separate sections connected by two short passages. The western two-story, two-bay section and eastern 1½-story one-bay-square section are covered by east-west gable roofs. They are joined at their common, central gable ends by a short one-story passage. A northern 1½-story one-bay square section is covered by a north-south gable roof. It is joined to the eastern section by a short gable-roofed passage.

The western section facas south. A shed-roofed porch featuring chanfered posts covers the facade. Two over two windows light this part of the house. The west gable end is unfenestrated. An interior brick stove-flue chimney heats this end.

A brick stove-flue chimney heats the west end of the eastern section. Six over six windows light this section.

An exterior brick stove—flue chimney heats the north end of the northern section. Its east side is covered by a porch whose north end is enclosed. A door enters the passage under the porch. A three over three window lights the half—story of this side.

Corrugated sheet metal covers all roofs. The house is sheathed in German siding, covered on parts of the west section by asbestos shingles.
